

Article 14

1. The first paragraph is short and occupies a single line of this page.
2. The second paragraph is deliberately longer so that it has a middle line which a highlight annotation can be placed over without covering the whole of the paragraph, and it finishes here with a final line that remains entirely unmarked by any annotation at all.
3. The third paragraph sits below the highlighted one and it is used as the anchor for a sticky note placed in the right margin.
4. The fourth paragraph is underlined in full so that an underline annotation can be checked against a known pair of sentences.

~~5. The fifth paragraph is struck out because it is treated as having been superseded by a later agreement between the parties.~~

6. The sixth paragraph carries two overlapping annotations, a highlight and a sticky note, whose rectangles are deliberately intended to intersect each other on this page.
